CONCENTRATION.

If the present status of the great prohibition reform suggests anything, says E. H. Parkinson, D. D., of Chicago, it is the pressing need of concentration upon the part of the various organizations in the Nation-wide movement. The other and many lines of temperance and prohibition effort have certainly led up to this very important one. And now to cling tenaciously to old theories and forms will only occasion delay when great and rapid strides are demanded. The Prohibition party, the Antislavery League, the W. C. T. U. and the numerous social and church temperance societies can well take fresh courage in seeing the culmination of long-continued plan and effort in the Nation-wide agitation for prohibition. To be sure, some of the workers have had this movement always in mind—they have not swerved from it, but there has not been a day when there was such an impetus toward a united concentration as there is just now. And we believe this phase of the subject marks the beginning of the end of the greatest reform of the century. The conviction obtains that there have been theorizing and organizing long enough. Let outright and downright work now be in evidence. The end to be accomplished is of vastly greater moment than the prolongation of the life of any particular organization. Let societies and organizations perish, but let the end toward which they have contributed be their enduring monument. If need be, they can well lose their identity in the unity and concentration now becoming universally apparent.

WILLSON HARD HIT.

There is a general curiosity to read the correspondence between ex-Gov. A. E. Willson and Theodore Roosevelt. It is said that Willson made a pitiful appeal to the ex-President to come to his rescue in Kentucky, assuring him that he would be for him in 1916 and that he had always been his friend. Roosevelt happens to remember that Willson was for Taft in the last campaign and did everything in his power to defeat the Progressive nominee. He was given to understand that he cannot expect any quarter from Roosevelt's followers. The Progressive newspapers are asking Willson to publish the correspondence, but he refused to do so. It is understood that Mr. Roosevelt himself may give copies of the letters to the press a little later in the campaign.

The registration all over the State is very gratifying to the Democrats. It shows in every instance an increased Democratic vote compared with the Republican and Progressive vote. In many cases the Progressives fell off 60 per cent. in the registered vote. The truth is that the Republicans and Progressives have been shot all to pieces in Kentucky and the bitterness between them is as great as it was in the last Presidential campaign.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Dr. E. B. Barnes delivered a powerful sermon at the First Christian church Sunday night on the question of Christian Science. One of the largest and most representative audiences ever assembled in the church was present to hear the discussion. The Doctor never at any time lost sight of the fact that others were entitled to their opinion, and while he delivered sledge hammer blows at the new doctrine of healing by faith, his language was at all times courteous and eminently respectful. He declared that he felt impelled to deliver this sermon for the reason that he conscientiously believed that the whole doctrine of Christian Science was erratic.

He never descended from the lofty plane and spoke with the enthusiasm and vigor of one who had the profound sense of an obligation resting upon him to combat that which he thought was destructive of the Christian religion and contrary, not only to religion, but to natural science as well.

The discourse was well received and congratulations were showered upon the Doctor at its conclusion.

We give excerpts from the sermon in another column.

DRAWN BIG CROWDS.

Gov. Beckham is drawing great crowds wherever he speaks, even in Republican districts his speeches have been received with great favor and hundreds of Republicans have pledged him their votes. Gov. Beckham's personal following is a very large and loyal one and they are enthusiastic over the assurance that he will represent Kentucky in the United States Senate. He will speak every day from now until the election, but he would have to speak half a dozen times a day to meet the demands that are being made upon him.—Exchange.

Masonic Grand Lodge Meets In Louisville.

The Kentucky Masons met in Louisville yesterday for the annual session of the Grand Lodge, and will convene for three days. This is the 114th annual session of the Grand Lodge, which was located in Lexington from 1890 to 1931, since which time it has met in Louisville. The Grand Chapter and Grand Council of Royal and Select Master Masons was also held in Louisville this week, of which Judge W. R. Shackelford, of this city, is present Deputy Grand High Priest, and will succeed Wm. Carson Black of Barbourville, present Grand High Priest.

Bryan Swings Through Ky.

Thursday, Kentucky was honored with a flying visit from Col. Bryan, the distinguished democrat and cabinet member and the personal representative of President Wilson. The day was as bad as could have been ordered from the lower regions but notwithstanding this, Col. Bryan was greeted with large and enthusiastic audiences at all stopping places. Kentucky is thoroughly aroused and will present a solid vote at the coming election from the democratic party. The only trouble seems to be that the party is so sanguine of success that it will lose many votes by the stay at home voters. Col. Bryan urges that every democrat be at the polls to do his duty and show his approval of the policies of the President and his cabinet.

William Martin Commits Suicide.

William R. Martin committed suicide in this city in the store room of T. O. Broadbuss on second street Monday afternoon. Mr. Martin, who is a son-in-law of Mr. James Church, and his wife had separated and had not been living together for some time. Martin was in the city and stepped into the store of Mr. Broadbuss and had him call Mrs. Martin over the phone and ask her if she would return to their home with him. She refused to do so and when Mr. Broadbuss told Martin what she said, he drank from a glass and said that he would end the matter. At the same time he exhibited a small bottle containing carbolic acid. Before medical assistance could be procured, he was dead. No cause is assigned for the rash act other than that he and his wife were not living together. Martin came from Tennessee and his father was notified of his death. The body was taken to the undertaking establishment of Oldham and Lackey where it was prepared for burial. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

A jury was empanelled who reviewed the remains and who made the following verdict: "We the jury find that William R. Martin came to his death by a fatal dose of carbolic acid taken with suicidal intent in the business house of Thomas O. Broadbuss in Richmond, Ky. on October 19, 1914."

FACTS ABOUT CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Excerpts from Sermon Preached By Dr. E. B. Barnes.

Dr. E. B. Barnes spoke Sunday to a large congregation on the subject, "What is Christian Science?" He desires to say that all the quotations he made were taken from the volume of Dr. Haldeman, of New York City, and can be verified. After writing his "Christian Science in the Light of Holy Scripture," he discovered that the 1909 edition of "Science and Health" had been changed from the edition of 1893, which he used. He found that the chapters had been completely transposed.

"The first chapter in the 74th edition has been changed to the sixth in the 1909 edition; the second to the seventh; the third to the eighth; the fourth to the ninth; the fifth to the tenth; the sixth to the fourth; the seventh to the third; the eighth to the fifth; the ninth to the eleventh; the tenth to the first and the eleventh to the second."

"The 74th edition is still in existence. This fact is stated for the benefit of those who, not finding the quotations I gave on the page specified, might conclude that no such quotation exists. The quotations are exact in every particular."

Why the volume was thus recast we will leave the reader to judge. I have used Dr. Haldeman's work in the preparation of my address because, so far as I know, the Christian Scientists have never attempted a refutation of its propositions. With the Bible in our hands, no refutation is possible. As an eminent authority has shown, Christian Science denied the following fundamental doctrines of Holy Writ:

It denies the creation of the material universe.
It denies the existence of sin.
It denies the facts of sin.
It denies death.
It denies that God formed man from the dust of the earth.
It denies that God is three persons in one Godhead.

It denies that Mary ever gave birth to a corporeal Christ.
It denies that Jesus ever had a real body.

It denies that Jesus is the Christ.
It denies that the blood of Jesus, shed on the Cross, is of any avail to cleanse from sin.

It denies that Christ bore our sins in His own body on the tree.

It denies that Christ died for our sins.

It denies that Christ offered Himself as a sin-offering.

It denies that Christ died at all.

It denies that for three days the body of Christ was dead in the tomb.

It denies that Jesus rose in flesh and bones.

It denies that Jesus was an infinite personality.

It denies that Jesus continued to exist after the Cross.

It denies that He ascended up into heaven and now sitteth at the right hand of God.

It denies the priesthood of Christ.

It denies justification by faith.

It denies regeneration, or second birth.

It denies the resurrection of the body, either for the righteous or the unrighteous.

It denies a final judgment.

It denies that a single soul is unsaved today, or can be finally lost.

It denies the efficacy and value of prayer.

It denies the necessity of marriage as a basis of procreation.

It denies that the name of Jesus should be exalted above every name and His personality worshipped.

These denials justify us in saying that while Christian Science is a religion, it has very little respect for the teachings of the New Testament. Mrs. Eddy handles that book in the most irreverent fashion. She repudiates the ordinances of the Church, such as Baptism and the Lord's Supper. But as it would be asking too much of the editor to give space for the sermon in full, let us consider the teaching of Christian Science on the subject of health:

Mrs. Eddy says: "Man never sick."

The Bible says: "They brought unto Jesus all sick people."

Science and Health, page 46: "You say a boil is painful; but that is impossible. The boil simply manifests your belief in pain."

Page 53—"A man's belief produces disease and all its symptoms."

Page 68—"Our ancestors never indulged in the refinement of inflamed bronchial tubes, because they were as ignorant as Adam, before he ate the fruit of false knowledge, of the existence of such things as tubes and tracheas, lungs and lozenges."

That it to say, that if parents will keep their children in ignorance that there dentists, oculists and aurists, there will never be any toothache, defective eyes or ears. Does any sane man believe this? Did the specialist produce the disease, or the disease the specialist?

Page 69—"All disease is the result of education."

Page 294—"One disease is as much a delusion as another."

Page 385—"Catarrh, rheumatism or consumption are not because of climate, but on account of belief."

Page 384—"The evidence of the senses is not to be accepted in the case of sickness."

"Such statements as these are the basis of all Christian Science teaching. If we could reconstruct ourselves, so that the senses did not convey impressions to the brain, we could all be Christian Scientists. But as man is constituted as he is at present, he will likely accept the testimony of his senses for some time to come.

But if the evidence of the senses is not to be accepted in case of sickness, is it to be accepted in case of health?

Page 400—"Some time it will be learned that mind constructs the body and that with its own materials. Hence no breakage or dislocation can really occur."

That can only be true in a world where there are no bones to break.

Opposed to the teachings of Mrs. Eddy is the teachings of the New Testament. Jesus said, "They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." He did not think that sickness was an illusion.

"And all the city was gathered together at the door. And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases."—Mark 1:33-34.

If Jesus knew that these people were not sick and did not tell them so, He is not worthy of our trust. If they only thought they were sick He should have said so as an honest man. Besides, if they were not sick He pretended to work miracles which were no miracles, and is guilty of deception. The very suggestion of such things is a reflection upon the character of Christ.

He healed a man who was deaf and dumb; He healed the sick of the palsy; He healed a woman who had an issue of blood; He healed the paralytic and the blind, and many others. According to Christian Science, these people were not sick and were not healed. The New Testament says they were sick and that Jesus healed them. Are we to believe Mrs. Eddy or the Son of God?

The Apostles worked many miracles of healing. Did they deceive the people and pretend to heal them when they were not sick?

We have already trespassed upon the editor's space, but we close with this statement: According to the teachings of Mrs. Eddy, Christian Science never worked a single cure. For if there is no sickness, how can anyone be sick? And if no one is sick, how can anyone make them well?

If people only think they are sick, the alleged Christian Science cures are in the class with those effected by the bread pills of the physicians.

If sickness is real, then Mrs. Eddy's teaching is false. If sickness is not real, then all claims of Christian Science healing are false.

They that are whole need not a physician.

Ford School Wins Spelling Match.

There was a large crowd in attendance and about $65 was realized from the pie supper.

Spelling classes of the Ford graded school and the Hunt high school met at the former place Friday evening in one of the most heated contests ever waged here and which resulted in a victory for the Ford school. There was a large crowd in attendance and after the spelling match a pie supper was held. In a contest for the prettiest girl present, it resulted in a tie between Misses Susie Tharp and Mary Morton. This contest created a great deal of interest, as did the ugly man's contest. The names of the winners of the latter are withheld from publication at their request.

"The Girl of My Dreams."

This delightful musical play—"refined and charming musical play"—as the Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and New York observers declare. "The Girl of My Dreams" will be seen here at the Opera House on Thursday, Oct. 29. It is notable, they say, for the infectious lift of its melodies and for the especially artistic performance of Viola Cain in the leading feminine role of Lucy Medders and Bert Gardner as Harry Swifton, the bachelor, who is "ready to quit and be good."

The success of the music may be foreseen, inasmuch as the composer of the score was the late Karl Hoschna, who wrote the "feeling" tunes encoined in "Madame Sherry" and "High Links."

The librettists, whose work proved in many cases to be no less entertaining for children than for adults, are Wilbur D. Nesbit, the Chicago Post humorist, and Otto Hauerbach, the adapter of "Madame Sherry." The joint effort of Messrs. Nesbit, Hauerbach and Hoschna had its first interpretation at the Illinois Theatre, Chicago, enjoying an extended run and returning later to the Chicago Opera House. This delightful musical play has been enthusiastically received in all the large Eastern cities, including a successful run at the Criterion Theatre, New York City. A large and excellent supporting company includes Irving Brooke, Roberta Taylor, Bud Murray, Marie Grenier, Adele Boulaize, George Carpenter, John Berkson and Harry Humphreys, the original De Luxe Pony Ballet and a big American Beauty chorus.

The affair was perfectly informal, but greatly enjoyed, many old friends coming together after long separation. Notwithstanding the rainy day the guests were more than compensated by the warmth and cheer within. Quantities of red flowers were tastefully used about the house and during the pleasant hours ice cream, garnished with red cherries, was served with a variety of beautiful cakes. Mrs. Wallace will leave for her home the last of the week.

If the first meeting of the Cecilian Club, which was held with Mrs. A. R. Burnam, is a forecast of the year's programme, then the lovers of music have a real treat in store for them. Notwithstanding the bad weather, the attendance was large and a very delightful afternoon was spent in this most hospitable home. A very choice programme was given, the subject being, "Dance Music." Those who took part were: Mesdames M. C. Kellogg, S. J. McCaughey, John Allen, G. W. Pickels, and Miss Mary D. Pickels. Miss Emma Watts, who gave instrumental numbers; Mrs. T. D. Chenault, Mrs. H. B. Pickels and Miss Jamie Caperton, who added greatly to the pleasure of the evening with their interesting and beautifully prepared talks. The musical concluded with a Victrola number, after which delightful hot coffee, chicken salad, beaten biscuit, olives and mints were served. Mrs. Burnam was assisted in entertaining by her daughter, Mrs. Jennings Greenleaf, and her little grand-daughter, Margaret Burnam.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Club will be held in the lecture room of the Christian church, on Monday, October 26, at 2:30 o'clock. The Club wishes to thank the pastor and officers of the church for their generous courtesy in offering the room.

School, at the residence of Mrs. A. C. Buchanan on West Main street. Prof. Grinstead and Keith, of the History Department, presented scholarly papers and the discussions which followed were of great interest. "After Using Peruna Many Years"

I can say that Peruna is a fine remedy for catarrh and disease of the tonsils and many other ailments. It is manufactured by a well-known company, who are perfectly reliable.

A Tonic with slight laxative qualities.

"I have noticed a great many others taking this remedy, and I have yet failed to see a case where the continued use of Peruna did not complete a satisfactory cure in reasonable time."

Luke McLuke Says

Cincinnati Enquirer

When a man tells his age he usually adds a year or two. But a woman always knocks off six or seven years.

Some of the fellows who believe only half what they hear always believe the wrong half.

Some girls marry for love. A few marry for money. And a lot more marry because it is their last chance.

They are all alike. A little girl with a ring that has a glass set is perfectly contented until she meets another little girl who has a ring with two glass sets in it.

Lots of men who brag that they always profit by their mistakes, will go ahead and get married the second time.

The fellow who always advises his wife to act as she thinks best is always bragging that his wife always acts on his advice.

If you steal money you can serve your sentence and get some time off for good behavior. But you never get off that easy when you marry money.

A bachelor can be a fool and live in blissful ignorance of the fact. But a married man is reminded of it a dozen times a day.

Somewhat or other the fellow who is always rooting for his Heavenly Home wants to stick around in this Wicked World just as long as he possibly can.

The accident insurance companies are not in business for their health. That's the reason why you can't get a policy that insures against accidental marriage.

A third party never makes a hit with a Republican, a Democrat, or a Lover.

The fellow who can tell you all about Cain's wife is usually the same lad who couldn't repeat the names of more than four of the Twelve Apostles.

Some fellows can't wait and try to beat the barber with a biplane or a monoplane. But most of us are willing to do our flying after we become angels.

It may surprise most married women to know that the "house-bound," meaning a man who had taken a wife and was bound to the house.

When the chest feels on fire and the throat burns, you have indigestion, and you need HERBINE to get rid of the disagreeable feeling. It drives out badly digested food, strengthens the stomach and purifies the bowels. Price 50c. Sold by Wines' Drug Store.—Adv. 1m.

All Will Come Right In The End.

I want to believe in the happy old way That all will come right in the end some day. That life will be better and days will be sweet. That roses will carpet the world for men's feet. That love and affection and honor and trust Will lift us from sorrow and shadow and dust.

I want to go toiling with this in my heart That every day brings us the joy of a start.

Fresh with endeavor and duty and truth, As we swing to our tasks with the vigor of youth.

Singing the music of love and of cheer Till clouds drift apart and the clouds disappear.

I want to go trusting that this will be so As out to the toll and the tumult we go.

That hearts will be kinder and life will grow bright With the blessing of labor that leads to the light.

That troubles, like bubbles, will burst and sway. And all will come right in the end some day.

Illinois Secretary of State Kills Himself.

Harry Woods, Secretary of State of Illinois, a Democratic Senatorial candidate at the September primary, killed himself last week. He was found by his wife in the rear of the garage at his home with a bullet wound in his forehead and an automatic pistol clutched in his right hand. No note of explanation was left by him, and the only clue which would give a possible indication for a cause of the tragic deed was a bulky bundle of papers, showing extensive dealings in grain through a Chicago brokerage house.

There is a dear little dudeling in town who goes calling with his hair parted in the middle, and his lengthy, sunny locks held in place by tortoise shell side combs.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

Hon. R. W. Miller entertained Governor McCreary and a number of friends at supper Tuesday night, and a season of refreshments and good cheer was enjoyed. The supper, which consisted of nearly everything good to eat, was served in courses on a table beautifully decorated with roses and other flowers, and showed how well versed Mrs. Miller, who gracefully presided, is in the culinary art.—Interior Journal.

A frightful accident occurred at Nicholasville on the night of October 11, in a runaway. Miss Julia Hayes, of Union Mills, was driving to the city, accompanied by her niece, when the horse became frightened and ran away, overthrowing the surrey, under which Miss Hayes was caught and dragged about 100 yards. Her collar bone and two ribs were broken and she received internal injuries from which she may die. The little girl escaped unhurt.

Miss Elvira Miller, of the Times staff, has the following to say relative to Howard Neale, owner of Bermuda Girl, who won the recent futurity stake: "While I am willing to take off my hat out of respect to the crepe hung on Col. Columbus Simon's door, I am fain to join in the merry-making in Madison county over the victory of Bermuda Girl. Col. Howard Neale, the owner, is one of the best known breeders of trotters in the Blue Grass, and his beautiful home near Richmond, Ky., is the center of a constant and generous hospitality. At this place there is a magnificent track on which he breaks and exercises his horses, and there is a tradition to the effect that he drives them with hatchet or knife instead of a whip. Certain it is that they tremble before him and he manages to get more speed out of them than any subsequent owner. Colonel Neale is a sparely built brunet, affable in manner and exceedingly fond of social life. He is a fine violinist and can handle a fiddle as well as he can a horse."

Kentucky Credit Association Formed in Lexington.

The Kentucky Rural Credit Association, the first organization of its kind in the United States, opened offices in the Fayette National Bank building in Lexington last Wednesday. The association is declared in its articles to be a co-operative organization for the practical working farmers of Kentucky, intended to give the farmers of this State cheaper money—that is, to provide them with long-term loans at lower rates of interest than they have been accustomed to paying. The association has a capitalization of $1,000,000. Gov. James B. McCreary is president; Chas. H. Berryman, general manager of Elmdorf Farm, the famous place of the late James B. Haggin, is vice-president; Judge Jno. M. Lassing, of Newport, former member of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, general counsel; James L. Watkins, successful Lexington business man, treasurer, and Jo C. VanMeter, of Lexington, farmer and business man, secretary.

In addition to those named, the board of directors is made up of Morgan O. Hughes, of Bowling Green, farmer, banker and lecturer on agriculture for the government; State Senator Henry G. Overstreet, of Owensboro; State Senator Robert H. Scott, of Paducah, author of the bill introduced in the General Assembly at the last session to create a state Rural Credit Association; Thos. J. Biggs, of Mt. Sterling; L. L. Dorsey, of Anchorage; Forrest Butts, of Carrollton; Wm. H. Giltner, of Eminence; and P. M. Witt, president of the Central Savings Bank and Trust Co., of Newport, all successful farmers and business men.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper.

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer a great deal with pain in the back, bearing-down feeling, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy will do for them. Every reader of this paper, who has not already tried it, by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores.

CURES THE CAUSE.

That Is The Rheuma Treatment For All Forms of Rheumatism.

Drives Poison From The Blood and Wakes Up Sluggish Organs.

If you are suffering from rheumatism, no matter in what form, get rid of it by doctoring the blood and kidneys. That is the only way to thoroughly get it out of your system.

Get a bottle of Rheuma of B. L. Middleton or any druggist. This standard remedy gets into the blood and drives out the poison, whether it is uric acid or other sediment. It dissolves the poison and passes it along in the blood to the bowels and kidneys, which will throw it off in short order. In a few days the terrible pains will cease and you will realize you are being permanently cured.

Rheuma does not injure the stomach or heart during the treatment. It will increase your appetite, create a free, natural movement of the bowels, wake up your sleepy liver, and cleanse your diseased kidneys.

Rheuma costs only 50 cents, but is worth many times the price.—Adv.

Splendid Paper.

The new Climax-Madisonian, a consolidation of the Richmond Climax and Madisonian, appeared Friday, and was a humdinger. Bruce Duff at $7.35 per hundred.

Bombs Exploded Under Churches.

On last Tuesday bombs were planted under the famous St. Patrick's Cathedral and St. Alphonsus Roman Catholic church in New York City, which broke out all the windows and wrecked the interior of the buildings. So far the police are mystified at the explosions and no clues have been found.

Positively Masters Croup.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound cures the thick, choking mucus and clears away the phlegm. Opens up the air passages and stops the hoarse cough. The gasping, strangling fight gives way to quiet breathing and peaceful sleep. Harold Berg, Mass, Mich., writes: "We give Foley's Honey and Tar to our children for croup and it always acts quickly." No wonder a man in Texas walked 15 miles to the store to get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Every user is a friend. For sale by all dealers everywhere.—Adv.

The Cotton Pool.

At a meeting held last week Georgia bankers decided to participate in the $150,000,000 cotton pool, which has been suggested by Festus J. Wade at a business meeting in St. Louis, by which it was planned to retire 5,000,000 bales from the market.

The scheme contemplates that $50,000,000 of the pool be raised by the Cotton States. The money would be lent to the growers upon their cotton as security, valued at 6 cents per pound for one year at 7 per cent.

Stop Those Early Bronchial Coughs.

They hang on all winter if not checked, and pave the way for serious throat and lung diseases. Get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, and take it freely. Stops coughs and colds, heals raw, inflamed throat, loosens the phlegm and is mildly laxative. Chas. T. Miller, editor Enquirer, Cannelton, Ind., had bronchial trouble got very hoarse, and coughed constantly from a tickling throat. He used only Foley's Honey and Tar. Was entirely relieved. Wants others to know of Foley's Honey and Tar. For sale by all dealers everywhere.—Adv.

My Auto 'Tis of Thee!

My auto, 'tis of thee, short cut to poverty—of thee I chant. I blew a pile of dough on you two years ago, and now you quite refuse to go, or won't o'can't. Through town and countryside, you were my joy and pride, a happy day. I loved thy gaudy hue, thy nice white tires so new, but now you're down and out for true. In every way. To thee, old rattle-box, came many bumps and knocks; for these I grieve. Badly thy top is torn, frayed are thy seats and worn; the whoop ing cough effects thy horn, I do believe! Thy perfume swells the breeze, while good folks choke and wheeze, as we pass by. I paid for thee a price 'twould buy a mansion twice, now everybody's yelling "ice"—I wonder why? Thy motor has the pip and woe is thine. I too have suffered chills, ague and kindred ills, endeavoring to pay my bills since thou wert mine. Gone is my bank roll now, no more would I choke a cow, as once before. Yet if I had the mon, so help me John—amen, I'd buy myself a car again, and speed some more!

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

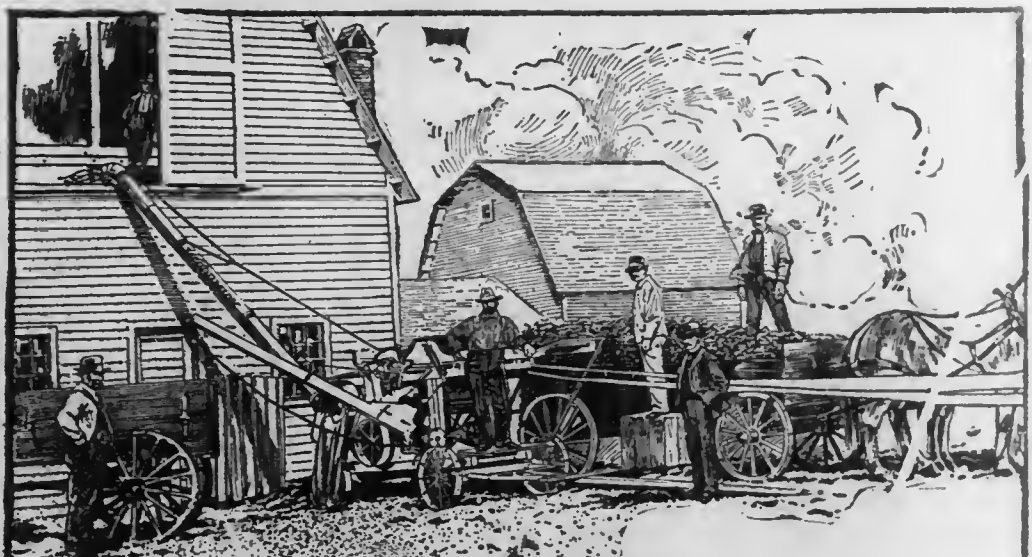

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing all my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of continuous success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. Pietro talked on, the silent Pietro, as if delivering a lecture. He had read much and thought much; it was seldom he spoke of the speculations which often filled his scholarly mind; today it seemed easy to talk of everything. Joy had set wide all the doors of his being. Alixe opened her eyes in astonishment.

"Pietro! You are talking like a book! But it is true; something of that sort has come to me, too—which proves it to be true. I have felt all ways that Francois had notes in him which are not on our pianos." Pietro smiled, looking at her.

"And yet, Alixe, you do not love Francois, with all these gifts and all his power over hearts—but only comfort me?"

"Alixe straightened against his arm. 'Monsieur le Marquis Zappi, the gentleman I—care for, is not—commonplace. I thank you not to say it,' she shot at him, and then, melting to a sudden intensity, she put a hand on each side of his dark face and spoke earnestly. 'Pietro, dear, listen. I believe I always cared for you. When I was little it hurt me to have Francois forever the one to do the daring things. Do you remember how I used to scold at you because you would not fight him?' Pietro smiled again. 'Then he was captain of the school and you only a private, and I cried about that when I was alone at night. And when you went off to Italy so quietly, with never a word said about the danger, I did not know that you were doing a fine deed—I thought it a commonplace that you should go back to your country, till Francois opened my eyes.'

"Francois?" Pietro asked.

"Yes. The day before he went to join you we were riding together and he told me what it meant to be a patriot in Italy under the Austrians. That day I realized how unbearable it would be if anything happened to you. But I thought I cared for Francois; if he had spoken that day I should have told him that I cared for him. But he did not; he went—and was in prison five years."

"And all that time I believed you loved him, and were mourning for him," Pietro said gently.

"I half believed it too," Alixe answered. "Yet all the time I was jealous for you, Pietro, for I was still Francois who was the hero—not you. Then when there came a question of his rescue I was mad with the desire to have you do it—and you did it."

Her voice dropped. She laid her hand against his shoulder and spoke, in a quick, cautious way.

"But all that is immaterial. I just love you—that's the point." A moment later she spoke again. "I want to finish telling you—and then we need never speak of it again. I did think you were commonplace. And yet I knew in my heart you were not, for I resented your seeming so. So I was to be a hero. I had that echo of a schoolgirl's romance about Francois in my mind, and I clung, all along, to the idea that I loved him and that perhaps he secretly loved me but would not say it because he was poor and a peasant; that he was waiting till his future was made. Then, one day, only the other day, he told me that he had asked three wishes of life—of the good fairies," she said. One was to make Prince Louis Emperor, one was to be Marshal of France; the third—she stopped.

"What?" Pietro demanded, his mouth a bit rigid.

"Alixe flushed and smiled and took Pietro's big hand and covered her eyes with it. 'That I should—love you, Monsieur. He said he had wished that all his life.'

"May heaven grant him his wish," said Pietro fervently, and then, reflecting, "It seems a strange wish for Francois. You are sure, Alixe?"

"Yes, he said so," Alixe insisted. "Our dear Francois," she went on softly, and the blue intensity of her eyes grew misty.

"Dear Francois!" she repeated. "It is only he who could have had those three wishes. The single one that was for himself was not because he cared for it himself, but because it was the Emperor's prophecy."

"I always thought," Pietro spoke slowly, "that it was not indeed for himself that he wished to be a Marshal some day, but because it might make him, in a manner, your equal. It was for you."

"For me!" Alixe was astonished. "I never thought of that. I think you thought of it, Pietro, only because you cared for me—and thought Francois must care also."

"Yes, I thought he cared," Pietro considered. "I can not believe otherwise yet."

"You may believe it," Alixe was firm. "For he said that what he had wished always was that I should—love you. I did it mostly to please Francois, but not to be given here. The minds of these two happy lovers were full of that third who had been so close always, to each of them."

"Pietro," Alixe spoke earnestly, coming back to the same subject, "you know that I love Francois—of course. But you do not know in what way. I love him as if he were one of the saints—but also as if he were a helpless little child. Yet not—Pietro—as if he were—the man I love. I would give my life for him in a rush of delight, if he needed it. But I know now, whatever were my vague dreams in past years, that it is not in Francois to care for a woman as a human man."

"I am not so sure," said Pietro, and shook his head.

"You know I am not abusing our Francois," Alixe protested. "Why, Pietro, my father believes, and I believe, that if affairs should so happen that he has the opportunity he may yet be one of the great characters in history. My father says he is made up of inspirations, illuminations—and limitations."

"Yes," said Pietro thoughtfully. "He has the faults of brilliancy and fearlessness. He judges too rapidly. If he were afraid ever—if he saw the other side of a question ever, his judgment would be safer. It may well happen that he will be one of the great men of Europe; it may also happen that by some single act of mismanagement he will throw away his career—or his life. God keep him safe!" Pietro said simply.

And Alixe echoed it—"God keep him safe!" And then, "I am going to write him, Pietro—about us. My father knows where to reach him at Boulogne. I am going to say just a word—what he has wished for all his life is true. It will get to him the night before the battle."

"Are you sure you are right, Alixe?" Pietro asked doubtfully.

"Sure," said Alixe buoyantly. "Give him my love, then," said Pietro.

THE $1,000,000.00 MYSTERY

(By Harold McGrath)

11TH EPISODE

(PRINTED IN THE CLIMAX-MADISONIAN EVERY WEDNESDAY.
SHOWN AT THE OPERA HOUSE THURSDAY NIGHT)

Today she was an onion ship; which precludes any idea of adventure. She was about four thousand tons, and her engines were sternward and not amidship. She carried two masts and a half dozen holst booms, and the only visible sign of anything new on her was her bowsprit. This was new doubtless because she had poked her nose too far into her last ship.

Her crew was orderly and tractable. There were shore drunks, to be sure, because they were sailors; but they were not at work. They chatted about briskly, for they were on the point of calling for the Bahamas—perhaps for more onions. Presently the windlass creaked and shrilled, and the bobby links, much in need of tar paint, red as fish gills, clattered down into the cabin. As it came over, the paint was costly, and this was done only when the anchor threatened to stay on the bottom.

There was a sailor among this crew, and he went by the name of Steve Blossom; and he was one of his kind. A grimy dime novel protruded rakishly from his hip pocket, and his right cheek was swollen as with the toothache, due, probably, to a generous "chaw" of Seaman's Delight. He was a real tobacco chewer, for he rarely spat. He was as peaceful as a back-water bay in summer; non-argumentative and passive, he stood his watch in fair weather and foul.

No one gave the anchor any more attention after it came to rest. The great city over the way was fair-like in its haziness and softened lines. It was the poetry of angles, of shafts and spars of stone; and Steve Blossom, baying a moment to himself, leaned against the rail and stared regretfully. He had been generously drunk the night before, and it was a pleasant recollection. Chance led his glance to trail down the cutwater. His neck stretched from his collar like a turtle's from its shell.

"Well, I'll be hornsogged!" he murmured, shifting his cud from starboard to port.

Caught on the fluke of the anchor was the strangest looking box he had ever laid eyes on. There were leather and steel bands and diamond-shaped onions of the Gilson house. "Onions!" Quite unconsciously he spoke this word aloud.

"Hub? Well, if I don't like onions, find a hooker that packs violets in her hold," was the cheerful advice of the man at Steve's elbow.

"Who's talkin' 't' you?" grunted Steve. "Who did I say?"

"Onions, ye lubber! Don't we know what onions is? Ain't we smelt 'em so long that ye could stick yer nose in 't' starboard light an' never smell no kerosene? Onions! Pass 't' cawf'y."

Steve helped himself first. The man who spoke barked over him, and they were not on the best of terms. There was no real reason for this frank antagonism; simply, they did not splice any more effectually than cotton rope and hemp splice. Sailors are moody and superstitious; at least they generally are on hookers of the "Captain Manners" breed. Steve was superstitious and Jim Dunkers was moody and had no thumb on his left hand. Steve hated the sight of that red nubbin. He was quite certain that it had been a whole thumb once, on the way to gouge out somebody's eye, and had inadvertently connected with somebody's teeth.

Spanish doubloons and pearls and diamonds and rubies! It was mighty hard not to say these words out loud, too; blame them into the sullen faces grouped around the table. He was off watch till midnight; and he was watching if he could get the box without attracting the attention of the lookout, who had a devilish keen eye for everything that stirred on deck or on water. Well, he would have to risk it; but he would wait till full darkness had fallen over the sea and the lookout would be compelled to keep his eyes off the deck. The boys wanted him to play cards.

"Not for me. Busted. How long d'ye thing '40 'll last in New York, anyhow?" And he stalked out of the fore-castle and went down into the waist to enjoy his evening pipe, all the while keeping a weather eye forward, at the ratty old pilot house.

It was ten o'clock, land time, when he rammed his cutty into a pocket and resolutely walked forward. If enemies, he saw an enemy even in his shadow.

At four o'clock he turned in and slept like a log.

In the morning he found his opportunity. For half an hour the forecastle was empty of all save himself. Feverishly he pried back the boards, found the brace beam, and gently laid the box there. It was a mighty curious looking box. Once he had stoked up the Chinese coast from the Philippines, and he judged it to be Chinese in origin. He tried to pry open the cover and left his eyes upon the treasure; but under the leather and ivory and mother of pearl was imperious steel. It would take an ax or a crowbar to stir that lid. He sighed. He replaced the boards, and became to all appearances his stolid self again.

But all the way down to the Bahamas he was moody, and when he answered any questions it was with words spoken testily and jerkily.

"I know what's 't' matter," said Dunkers. "He's in love."

"Shut your mouth!"

"Didn't I tell yuh?" laughed the tangle, dancing toward the companionway. "Steve's in love, 'r he didn't git drunk enough on shore 't' satisfy his whale's belly!"

A boot thudded spitefully against the door jamb.

"You fellows let me alone, 'r I'll bash in a couple o' heads!"

"O, yuh will, will yuh?" cried Dunkers from the deck. "If yuh want a little exercise, yuh can begin on me, yuh moonish swab! What's 't' matter with yuh, anyhow? Where'd yuh git this grouse? What've we done 't' yuh? Huh?"

"You keep out o' my way, that's all. I'm mindin' my watches, an' don't ask no odds o' you duffers. What if I have a grouse? Is it any o' your business? All right. When we step ashore at 't' Bahamas, Mister Jim Dunkers, I'll tear the ropes out o' your pulley blocks. But till we git there, you 't' upper bunk an' me 't' mine."

"Leave 't' o' your grouse alone, Jim. 'T' mate won't stand for no scarpin' aboard. We'll bave 't' thing done right in 't' custom sheds. We'll have a finish fight, Queensberry rules, an' may 't' best man win."

"I'm willin'," said Jim.

"So'm I," agreed Steve. But his intentions were not honorable. He proposed to desert before any fight took place. Not that he was physically afraid; no; he wanted to dig his hands deep into those doubloons and pieces-of-eight.

So the four days down passed otherwise uneventfully, and some day Steve was going to buy it and hang it over the entrance of the Gilson house) slithered down into the smiling waters of the bay, Steve concluded that discretion was the better part of valor. He would steal ashore on the quarantine tug which lay alongside. He was willing to fight under ordinary circumstances, but he had to get his treasure in safety first. They could call him a wench if they wanted to; devil it did he care. So he pried back the boards of his bunk wall, took out the box, eyed it fondly, and noted for the first time the lettering on it:

STANLEY HARGREAVE.

He wrinkled his brow in the effort to recall a plate by that name, but was unsuccessful. No matter. He hugged the box under his coat and made for the gangway, and inadvertently ran into his enemy.

Dunkers caught a bit of the box peeping from under the coat.

"What 'a' yuh got there?" he demanded truculently.

"None o' your damn business! You lemme by; hear me?"

"Ain't none o' my business, huh? Where'd yuh git a box like that? Steal it? By cripes, I'm goin' 't' have a look at that box, my hearty. It don't smell like honest onions."

"You lemme by," breathed Steve, with murder in his heart.

Suddenly the two men closed, surged back and forth, one determined to take and the other to hold this mysterious box. Dunkers struggled to uphold his word; not that he really wanted the box but to prove that he was strong enough to take it if he wanted to. The name on the box flashed and disappeared. It was a kind of shock to him. He and Blossom went battering against the rail. Dunkers' grip slipped and so did Blossom's. The result was that the box was catapulted into the sea. With an agonizing cry, Blossom leaned far over. He saw the box oscillate for a moment, then sink gracefully in a zigzag course, down through the blue waters. Faster and fainter it grew, and at last vanished.

"I'm sorry, Steve; but yuh wouldn't let me look at it," said Dunkers, contritely.

"Damn you; I'm goin' 't' kill y' for that!"

It became a real fight this time, fist and foot, tooth and nail; one mad with the lust to kill and the other desperately intent on living. It was one of those contests in which honor and fair play have no part. But for the timely arrival of the captain and some of the crew Dunkers would have been badly injured, perhaps fatally. They bawled back Blossom, roaring out his oaths at the top of his lungs. It took half an hour's arguing to calm him down. Then the captain demanded to know what it was all about. And blubbering, Steve told him.

"Six hundred feet of water, if I've got my reckoning right. The anchor lies in 60 feet, but the starboard side drops sheer 600. You awab! Why didn't you bring the box to me? A man has a right to what he finds. I'd have taken care of it for you till we got back to port. I know; you were greedy; you thought I might want to stick my fist into your treasure. And you'll never find it in 600 feet of water and tangled, porous coral. That's what you get for being a blamed hog. As for you," and the captain turned to Dunkers, "get your dunnage and your pay and hunt for another boat back. I won't have no murder on board 'Captain Manners.' And the sooner you go, the better."

"I'll go, sir," said Dunkers, readily enough. Had the misfortune happened to him and bad Blossom been the aggressor, he would want his life. He understood. Like the valet in "Olivette," it was the time for disappearing.

"An' keep out o' my way. I'll git y' yet," growled Blossom. "On the mate, 'r I'll have you put in irons, yuh pig!"

"All right, sir. I've said all I'm goin' 't' say 'day,' and Blossom strode off. "What was the box like?" asked the captain of Dunkers.

"Chinese contraption, sir; leastwise it looked that way to me. Did look as if it had been in 't' water long, sir. Somethin' lost overboard by some private yacht, 't' my thinkin'." I'll keep out o' Steve's way. I'll lay low on shore, sir."

And though Steve made a perfect range of the spot, he never came back to find the mysterious box, never saw the Gilson house back home, nor did he ever see Dunkers again.

Steve had been brooded continually, and was frequently found blubbering; and one night he skipped his watch and went to Davy Jones' locker.

Dunkers had not told about the name he had seen on the box; and Blossom had not thought to. The name Hargreave had instantly brought back to Dunkers' mind the newspaper stories he had recently read. There was no doubt in the world that this box belonged to the missing millionaire, who had drawn a million from his banks and vanished; and, moreover, there was no doubt in Dunkers' mind that this million lay in the Bahaman waters. It had been drawn up from the bottom of the sound, under the path of the balloon.

Then, to take a most minute range. It would require money and partners; but half a loaf would be far better than no loaf at all; and he was determined to return to New York to find backing. Finding is keeping, on land or sea.

Now it happened that his favorite grog shop was a cheap saloon across the way from the headquarters of the Black Hundred; and Vroon occasionally dropped in, for he often picked up a valuable bit of maritime news. Dunkers was an old friend of the bar-keeper, and he proceeded to pour and guzzle down his throat a very poor substitute for whisky. He became communicative. He bragged. He knew where there was a million, and all he needed was a first-class diving bell. A year from now he would not be drinking cheap whisky; he'd be steering a course up and down Broadway and buying wine when he was thirsty. He was no miser. But he had to have a diving bell; and where the blue devil got he got one with $12, and an ingersoll watch in his pocket.

When the table Vroon made a sign which the bartender understood. Then he rose and approached Dunkers.

"I own a pretty good diving apparatus," he said. "If you've got the goods, I'll take a chance on a fifty-fifty basis." Vroon did not believe there was anything back of his talk; but it always paid to dig deep enough to find out. "Have a drink, and, Bill, give us a real whisky, now, let's hear your yarn."

"I don't know yuh," said Dunkers, with drunken caution. "How is it, Bill?" turning to the bartender.

"He's the goods, Jim. You've heard of Wyant & Co.?"

"Sure I've heard o' them. Best divin' apparatus they is. Mr. Brooks, general manager for Wyant & Co. I can O. K. him."

Vroon threw an appreciative glance at the bartender. He was not affiliated with the Black Hundred, but he had often aided Vroon in minor affairs.

"All right, if yuh say so, Bill. Well, here's 't' yarn."

And when he had done, Vroon smoked quietly without speaking.

And That is Why Jones Was Able, Some Weeks Later, to Hide Once More the Original Box.

CHAPTER XIII.

An Agent From Russia.

The Black Hundred, not as individuals but as an organization, began to worry. Powerful, and often reckless and daring because it was powerful, it began to look about for some basic cause for all these failures against Hargreave's daughter and Hargreave's ghost. They had tried to put the inquisitive reporter out of the way; they had laid every trap they could think of to catch the mysterious visitor at the Hargreave home; they had thrown out a hundred lures to bring Hargreave out of his lair, and failed; and they had lost a dozen valuable men and several thousand dollars. This must end somewhere, and quickly.

The one ray of hope for the conspirators lay in the fact that Florence had never seen her father and knew not in the least what he looked like. They determined to try again in this direction.

"Give it all up," said the countess to Braine. "I tell you, whatever is back of all this is stronger than we are. He knows the organization, and for all we know he may be a ghost."

"I never go back," smiled Braine. "There's something more than the million. There's the sport of the thing. We've been bested in a dozen bouts, and nearly always by a fluke. They have the breaks, as they say out at the Polo grounds."

"But the time and expense when we might be getting results elsewhere! I tell you, Leo, I'm afraid. It's like always hearing some one behind you and never finding anybody when you turn. I have told you my doubts. I have also told you to trap that butler, but you've always laughed."

"You are seeing ghosts, Olga. A new man from holy Russia," shrugging, "is coming tonight. Evidently the head over there thinks our contraptions of late have not been up to where there's a first-class diving bell. A year from now he would not be drinking cheap whisky; he'd be steering a course up and down Broadway and buying wine when he was thirsty. He was no miser. But he had to have a diving bell; and where the blue devil got he got one with $12, and an ingersoll watch in his pocket."

The door opened and the executive chamber became silent.

"Count Paroff," boomed the voice of Vroon. "He will present his credentials."

This formality was executed as prescribed by the rules; and Count Paroff was given his chair. He spoke for a while, rather pompously.

"The head organization is not satisfied with its offerings in this Hargreave affair," he said in conclusion. "You are slow."

"Then you have come with some suggestions for the betterment of our business?" asked Braine ironically.

"Sir, this is not the hour for flippancy," said the agent coldly.

Braine made a sign with his hand, a sign not observed by every one. Instantly Paroff bent lowly. He recognized that the speaker was the actual, not the nominal, head of the American branch.

"What are your suggestions?" inquired the nominal head from his chair, anxious to avoid a clash between the newcomer and the truculent master of them all.

A Strong Endorsement.

unless the cause is removed. If the cause is not removed, the deafness is permanent. It is a condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. "Don't yuh believe it?" demanded Dunkers, truculently.

"But 600 feet of water, in a coral bottom, and no way of telling just where it fell overboard. That's a tough proposition."

"O, it is, is it? I'm a sailor. I can lay my hand right over 't' spot. Do yuh think I'd be fool enough 't' hunt for it without a perfect range?" Dunkers tapped his coat pocket suggestively.

And Vroon knew that the one thing he wanted was there, a plan or a drawing of the range. So there was another man shanghaied that night, and his destination was Cape Town, 22 days' voyage by the calendar.

Vroon carried his information to the organization that same night. They would start the expedition at once, and till this was accomplished, Hargreave's daughter was to be immune from attacks. Besides, it would give Hargreave (wherever he was) and the others the idea that the Black Hundred had concluded to give up the chase.

Above, with his ear to a small hole, skillfully bored through the ceiling without permitting the plaster to fall, knelt a man with a bandaged arm. He could never see any faces; no one ever took off a mask in this sinister chamber. But there were voices, and he was going to forget some of them. After the meeting came to an end, he waited an hour after, and then stole down into the street by the aid of the fire escape. Later, he entered a telephone booth and called up Jones.

Then, one leather and steel box, dotted with bits of ivory and mother-of-pearl, became two; and the second one was soaked in mud and salt water for two weeks till you could not have told it from the original. And that is why Jones was able, some weeks later, to hide once more the original box. As for the substitute, just as Braine was about to use a mallet and chisel upon it, the lights went out. There was a wild scramble, a chair or two was overturned.

"The door, the door!" shouted Braine, furious.

It slammed the moment the words left his lips. And as suddenly as they had gone out the lights sprang up. The box was gone. There were evidently traitors among the Black Hundred.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

unless the cause is removed. If the cause is not removed, the deafness is permanent. It is a condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed, it causes a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are cured. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

Don't yuh believe it?" demanded Dunkers, truculently.

"But 600 feet of water, in a coral bottom, and no way of telling just where it fell overboard. That's a tough proposition."

"O, it is, is it? I'm a sailor. I can lay my hand right over 't' spot. Do yuh think I'd be fool enough 't' hunt for it without a perfect range?" Dunkers tapped his coat pocket suggestively.

And Vroon knew that the one thing he wanted was there, a plan or a drawing of the range. So there was another man shanghaied that night, and his destination was Cape Town, 22 days' voyage by the calendar.

Vroon carried his information to the organization that same night. They would start the expedition at once, and till this was accomplished, Hargreave's daughter was to be immune from attacks. Besides, it would give Hargreave (wherever he was) and the others the idea that the Black Hundred had concluded to give up the chase.

Above, with his ear to a small hole, skillfully bored through the ceiling without permitting the plaster to fall, knelt a man with a bandaged arm. He could never see any faces; no one ever took off a mask in this sinister chamber. But there were voices, and he was going to forget some of them. After the meeting came to an end, he waited an hour after, and then stole down into the street by the aid of the fire escape. Later, he entered a telephone booth and called up Jones.

Then, one leather and steel box, dotted with bits of ivory and mother-of-pearl, became two; and the second one was soaked in mud and salt water for two weeks till you could not have told it from the original. And that is why Jones was able, some weeks later, to hide once more the original box. As for the substitute, just as Braine was about to use a mallet and chisel upon it, the lights went out. There was a wild scramble, a chair or two was overturned.

"The door, the door!" shouted Braine, furious.

It slammed the moment the words left his lips. And as suddenly as they had gone out the lights sprang up. The box was gone. There were evidently traitors among the Black Hundred.

CHAPTER XIII.

An Agent From Russia.

The Black Hundred, not as individuals but as an organization, began to worry. Powerful, and often reckless and daring because it was powerful, it began to look about for some basic cause for all these failures against Hargreave's daughter and Hargreave's ghost. They had tried to put the inquisitive reporter out of the way; they had laid every trap they could think of to catch the mysterious visitor at the Hargreave home; they had thrown out a hundred lures to bring Hargreave out of his lair, and failed; and they had lost a dozen valuable men and several thousand dollars. This must end somewhere, and quickly.

The one ray of hope for the conspirators lay in the fact that Florence had never seen her father and knew not in the least what he looked like. They determined to try again in this direction.

"Give it all up," said the countess to Braine. "I tell you, whatever is back of all this is stronger than we are. He knows the organization, and for all we know he may be a ghost."

"I never go back," smiled Braine. "There's something more than the million. There's the sport of the thing. We've been bested in a dozen bouts, and nearly always by a fluke. They have the breaks, as they say out at the Polo grounds."

"But the time and expense when we might be getting results elsewhere! I tell you, Leo, I'm afraid. It's like always hearing some one behind you and never finding anybody when you turn. I have told you my doubts. I have also told you to trap that butler, but you've always laughed."

"You are seeing ghosts, Olga. A new man from holy Russia," shrugging, "is coming tonight. Evidently the head over there thinks our contraptions of late have not been up to where there's a first-class diving bell. A year from now he would not be drinking cheap whisky; he'd be steering a course up and down Broadway and buying wine when he was thirsty. He was no miser. But he had to have a diving bell; and where the blue devil got he got one with $12, and an ingersoll watch in his pocket."

MOTHER SUPERIOR ROSARY HILL HOME

Tells How Vinol Restores Strength and Vitality to the Weak, Worn-Out Ones in Her Charge.

Rosary Hill Home, Hawthorne, N. Y. "I have been at work among the sick and poor for nearly eighteen years, and whenever I have used Vinol for run-down, weak or emaciated patients, they have been visibly benefited by it. One patient, a young woman, was so weak and ill she could hardly creep to my door for aid, and was leaning on a friend's arm. I supplied Vinol to her liberally and a month when she returned to thank me I hardly recognized her. She was strong, her color charming and her cheeks rounded out. These words are uttered from my heart in order that more people may know about Vinol, as there is nothing makes me happier in the world than to relieve the sick."

Mother M. ALPHONSA LATROFF, O.S.D., Hawthorne, N. Y.

Such disinterested and reliable testimony should convince everyone of the merits of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, for it builds up health and strength for all weakened and nervous conditions, whether caused from overwork, worry or chronic coughs and colds. If Vinol fails to benefit we return your money.

"I have been informed that Hargreave's daughter has never seen her father, not even a photograph of him," said Paroff, more amiably.

"We are absolutely certain that this is the case," said the nominal head, who was known as the president. "But we tried one play in that direction, and it failed miserably."

"I have the story," replied Paroff. "It was clumsily done. The ruse was an old one."

Braine was frank enough to admit the truth of this statement, however much he disliked the admission. He nodded.

"I have authority to take a band in this affair. We cannot waste all summer. Those government plans of the fortifications of the Panama are waiting. There's your millions. But the fact remains that it is the law of the Black Hundred never to step down till absolutely defeated. The hidden million is but half; we must find and
